Letters from Lisa

What do you want to be when you grow up? If you ask a child this, you will get an answer like, “a superhero, a teacher, a doctor, or a movie star.” When I was a little girl, I wanted to be a librarian. Not very exciting, but I loved to read and I loved the way new books smelled. I thought working in a place where you could just open a book and learn something new would be wonderful.

I never did get to be a librarian. Now, when someone asks me what I want to be when I grow up, I answer, “more like Jesus.” I want to be kind, loving, forgiving, and patient. (Two out of four isn’t bad; you get to guess which two).

I want to see other people the way He sees them, and I want to be the way He sees me. Wouldn’t you know it? He has giving me a book - a wonderful book where I can learn something new about Him every day. I bet you have one too.

De Colores,

Lisa
